To Whom It May Concern:

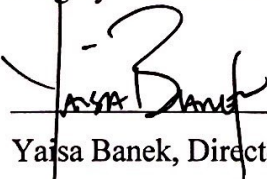

I am writing this recommendation letter on behalf of Brandon Inman. I am the Director of Instruction for students in our Upper Elementary program. I have had the pleasure of supervising Brandon for the last year.

During my time of working with Brandon I have known him to be a hard-working teacher. One who creates lessons that are engaging, circular-aligned, and project-based. It is evident that prior to teaching units of study he prepares by researching the aligned unit objectives and designs well-thought out lessons that helps students meet these objectives. Additionally, he understands that not all children learn at the same time and builds in opportunities for students to continue their learning.

Another strength that Brandon has is his belief that building a strong character is just as important as academics. Brandon cares about the social/emotional health of his students and implements different strategies that help meet these needs. He understands the necessity of building relationships first with his students and makes this a priority in his classroom.

Brandon is a team-player and works well with both his teammates and the other teachers in the building. He is present during meetings, supportively helps teachers when they need help, and contributes positively to our overall school culture.

I highly recommend Brandon for an elementary homeroom position.
